CONNECT WITH THE CHANCELLOR DR. KELLY DAMPHOUSSE

@KDAMP

CHANCELLOR@ASTATE.EDU

Dr. Kelly Damphousse [DAMF-iss] was appointed as chancellor of Arkansas State University by ASU System President Dr. Charles L. Welch May 17.

Damphousse, who has served as dean or interim dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Oklahoma in Norman since 2013, began his duties at A-State July 1.

A native of Canada, Damphousse served as associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at OU for nine years prior to becoming dean. The college is the university's largest and most diverse with an annual budget of $100 million, 31 academic and research units offering 60 degrees, nearly 600 faculty, more than 1,500 instructional or support staff, and almost 10,000 students. As dean, he worked with faculty, staff and alumni to cultivate more than $30 million in private giving to the college.

Damphousse, who once worked as a prison guard prior to his career in higher education, is a sociologist who has done extensive research on terrorism and substance abuse. In addition, he has served as OU's faculty athletics representative to the Big 12 Conference and NCAA since 2012. He and his wife, Beth, served as faculty-in-residence in an OU residence hall, living with 384 freshmen every year. Students voted him "Best OU Professor" in 2015.

"This is a humbling moment for me personally, but I am also very excited about this opportunity," Damphousse said. "Beth and I appreciate the confidence that President Welch, the search committee and the rest of A-State's community have in us. Together, we will all continue building on A-State's rich legacy begun so nobly by President V.C. Kays in 1910."

Damphousse holds a doctoral degree in sociology and a master's degree in sociology from Texas A&M University. He holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Sam Houston State University and an associate degree in law enforcement from Lethbridge College. He has two daughters: Kristen Howell, who just completed the first year of her master's degree in public health at Emory University, and Kayleigh Damphousse, who is assistant director of retention and persistence at the University of Florida.

FULBRIGHT GRANT RECIPIENTS NAMED

Arkansas State University announced April 7 that three A-State students have been offered Fulbright grants for the 2017-18 academic year by the U.S. Department of State and the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board.

Seniors Desirae Green, Arnelle Jones and Cameron Mealing were selected from over 10,000 applicants nationwide, and are the first Fulbright grant recipients from Arkansas State. Each will serve as an English language teaching assistant overseas during the upcoming academic year.

"These three students successfully competing for Fulbright grants is great both for them and for Arkansas State University," said Dr. Doug Whitlock, interim chancellor. "They will each enjoy a positive, transformative experience that will benefit them for the rest of their lives. It underscores the fact that the Arkansas State educational experience prepares students to compete with others from around the country. We can take great pride in this as a university community. This is also the sort of success that does not go unnoticed by prospective students. I think A-State can fully expect to see this success grow in the future."

"We are extremely proud of Arnelle, Desirae and Cameron, and for what they represent for Arkansas State," said Dr. Lynita Cooksey, provost and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and Research at A-State. "As the first Fulbright grant recipients from A-State, they are proof of success from the new program to recruit and assist our outstanding students in applications for elite undergraduate and postgraduate scholarship opportunities. Along with an increasing emphasis on providing undergraduate research opportunities, supporting students who want to go for competitive scholarships and mentoring them through the process is a part of Arkansas State's commitment to undergraduate education at the highest level."

The Fulbright U.S. Student Program is administered at Arkansas State University by Jennifer Salo, Honors College special project coordinator. Salo was one of 14 advisers selected to attend the Fulbright program adviser development initiative held March 15-17 in Washington, D.C. Salo was selected from a pool of over 120 advisers nationwide who were invited to apply.

This year marks the 71st anniversary of the Fulbright Program's establishment in 1946 under legislation introduced by U.S. Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas. Since then, the program has given more than 360,000 students, scholars, teachers, artists and scientists the opportunity to study, teach and conduct research, exchange ideas and contribute to finding solutions to shared international concerns.

DESIRAE GREEN

Green, a world languages and cultures major from Little Rock, will spend the academic year as an English teaching assistant in Spain, teaching in an elementary school in La Rioja.

As a student at A-State, Green is the recipient of multiple scholarships, including the A-State Incentive Scholarship and the Thompson Minority Scholarship.

ARNELLE JONES

Jones, an Honors student from Osceola majoring in communication studies with a minor in Spanish, will spend 10 months as an English teaching assistant in Manizales, Caldas, in Colombia.

She serves as the president of the Arkansas State Association of Black Journalists, and is a member of the A-State Debate and Forensics team.

CAMERON MEALING

Mealing is a communications studies major from Jonesboro. He will spend the academic year as an English teaching assistant in Senegal providing instruction at the middle/secondary school level.

Having served in both the U.S. Marine Corps and the National Guard, he is a founding member and past president of the A-State French Club and served as a member of the ROTC and the A-State Model United Nations organization.

CONVOCATION OF SCHOLARS

GOWEN NAMED WILSON AWARD WINNER

Jared Gowen, a senior from Garner who graduated from Arkansas State University in May 2017 with a degree in biological sciences, received the prestigious R.E. Lee Wilson Award for 2017 at the 84th student honors awards ceremony.

Gowen was selected from a group of eight Distinguished Service Award winners honored at the ceremony including Arnelle Jones of Osceola, Blaise Taylor of Jonesboro, Emilee Taylor of Jonesboro, Erin Langley of Beebe, Kelly Mendes of Jonesboro, Monica Norman of Hot Springs and Patrick Dietz of Searcy.

DIVERSITY AWARDS PRESENTED

Four individuals who demonstrated commitment to achieving a more diverse environment at Arkansas State University were recognized as recipients of the 2017 Excellence in Diversity Awards.

Recipients this year were: Skyler Jones, a senior majoring in interdisciplinary studies; Ja'von Long (pictured left), a senior criminology and sociology major; Dr. Dixie Keyes, professor of mid-level education in the College of Education and Behavioral Science; and LaGanzie Kale, founder and manager of KLEK-FM, the first minority-owned radio station in Jonesboro, and a 2003 A-State alumnus.

TWENTY ONE NAMED WHO'S WHO

Twenty-one outstanding upper-level students at Arkansas State University have been named to the prestigious "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges" for 2016-17. The students were introduced during a campus ceremony recognizing student leaders.

Jared Gowen of Garner received the "Outstanding Who's Who" award and a scholarship from Crews and Associates of Little Rock. The Crews firm was represented by Steve Pulley.

FOUR AWARDED FACULTY ACHIEVEMENT

The four recipients of the 2016-17 Faculty Achievement awards – in advising, professional service, scholarship and teaching – were honored during the 39th annual Faculty Honors Convocation April 11 along with 14 retiring faculty members.

This year's recipients were Dr. Justin Castro, assistant professor of Latin American history; Dr. LaQuita Saunders, assistant professor of history and co-director of the Pre-Law Center; Dr. Evelyn Taylor, assistant professor of social work; and Dr. Stacy Walz, assistant professor of clinical laboratory sciences and department chair.

RICHMOND-HAYDAR SCHOLARSHIP

The Richmond-Haydar Memorial Scholarship for International Students is presented each Spring to international students who demonstrate academic excellence and leadership, both inside and outside the classroom.

The 2017 undergraduate recipient was Yeon Jae Lee, a senior accounting major whose goal is to continue at A-State through completion of a master's degree. This year's graduate recipient was Pooja Ghai, a second-year student in the occupational therapy doctoral program who desires to improve the lives of those with disabilities.

STUDENT-ATHLETES HONORED

Before the Spring commencement ceremony, 37 A-State student-athletes were honored for their achievements both in the classroom and in their field of play.

These Red Wolves receiving diplomas represented the sports of football (6), women's soccer (6), baseball (5), volleyball (4), women's basketball (3), men's cross country (3), men's basketball (2), women's bowling (2), tennis (1), women's track and field (2), women's cross country (1), men's golf (1) and men's track and field (1).

Arkansas State University and Centennial Bank broke ground June 27 on construction of a new welcome center to be built in the heart of the A-State campus in Jonesboro.

Arkansas State University System President Dr. Charles L. Welch said, "This public-private partnership is another example of our commitment to a strong working relationship with the communities we serve. This welcome center will benefit thousands of future students and their families, and we are so thankful for Centennial Bank's contribution to this exciting new facility on our beautiful campus."

The site on Aggie Road will house both a full-service branch of Centennial Bank and a visitor center for future students and their families arriving to campus. The 3,833-square foot facility will become the new entrance to campus for those visiting for the first time and taking an official tour.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dr. Rick Stripling said, "We average over 6,000 scheduled campus visits per year, and the welcome center will serve as our launching pad for touring our beautiful campus. The Office of Recruitment will have a full-time person coordinating the campus experience from this center. We will have a new front door to Arkansas State. This will allow visitors to drive through the heart of campus life to ultimately reach the easily accessed welcome center."

STUDENTS SPLASH FOR SPECIAL OLYMPICS

A-State hosted its annual Polar Plunge for Special Olympics on a chilly February night at the Wolf Creek Apartments Clubhouse. Students and staff from various campus organizations did not shy away from the cool temps but took the plunge to raise more than $4,000.

RED WOLVES ROLL UP THEIR SLEEVES

Volunteer A-State partnered with the American Red Cross to host its bi-annual blood drive February 7-8 in the Reng Student Union. While the Red Cross manned the actual donation process, students and staff of A-State volunteered with registration, snacks and promoting around campus.

During the two-day initiative, 106 units of blood were collected. The next campus-wide blood drive is scheduled for September 19-20.

UP 'TIL DAWN RAISES RECORD FUNDS

Arkansas State University students participating in the "Up 'til Dawn" fundraising weekend surpassed their goal and raised $75,185 for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis.

This landed A-State as the ninth-best UTD fundraising program in the nation. The record-setting total was up more than $13,000, or 22 percent, over last year. With a very generous $5,000 donation, this year's event was presented by Richardson Orthopedics & Spine Surgery in Paragould.

A-STATE FOOD PANTRY SERVES CAMPUS

The A-State Campus Food Pantry continued its' service to campus during the Spring and Summer 2017 terms. The pantry has served more than 300 members of the A-State community (students, faculty or staff) and their families. Donation drives were coordinated with various campus organizations including Staff Senate, Student Government Association, and others.

The pantry is located at 2907 E. Johnson Avenue. Questions can be directed to pantry@AState.edu.

A-STATE DAY OF CARING

Eighty-five students and staff members from Arkansas State flooded the Jonesboro community for A-State Day of Caring April 7. Teams of student organizations and campus departments spent the day serving 11 non-profit agencies in 12 locations.

A-State United Way and Volunteer A-State teamed up to put the project together, and several area businesses provided lunch for the volunteers including Centennial Bank, Frito Lay, Newk's and Coca-Cola.

CAMPUS HOSTS RACE FOR THE CURE

The A-State campus was the site of the first-ever Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure held in Northeast Arkansas May 6. The race registered more than 4,000 runners and raised over $80,000 in its inaugural year. It was also recorded as the largest 5k in the history of the city of Jonesboro.

Susan G. Komen's mission is to "save lives by meeting the most critical needs in our communities and investing in breakthrough research to prevent and cure breast cancer."

There is one thing Arkansas State University has always done, and done well — put knowledge and research together to make communities stronger. With the opening of the new Innovation System, Arkansas State will continue to add to that legacy.

A group of prestigious speakers ushered in the three locations of the A-State Innovation System at the grand opening dedication ceremony, July 17 at the corner of Cate St. and Church St, directly across from The Garage.

Arkansas Governor Asa Hutchinson, A-State Chancellor Kelly Damphousse, President of Ritter Communications Alan Morse, Controller of Nucor-Yamato Keith Prevost, Chief Transformation Officer for the Arkansas Economic Development Commission Amy Fecher and Federal Cochairman of the Delta Regional Authority Chris Masingill provided remarks.

"The A-State Innovation System is designed to help both students and community members," said Ty Keller, director of A-State Innovate. "We aim to connect both innovators and entrepreneurs to resources that will help them create new products and/or start new businesses."

A-State Innovate is located in three different Jonesboro locations: The Garage at 219 South Church Street, a maker space/collaboration space; The Shop at 5501 Krueger Drive, a machine shop/woodshop that will be located on the ASU-Newport-Jonesboro campus; and The Lab at 504 University Loop West, a research facility and business incubator operated by the Arkansas State University Research and Development Institute (RDI) located in the Arkansas Biosciences Institute (ABI).

Through the integration of innovation, start-up support, technology transfer and partnerships with businesses and communities, the Innovation System provides opportunities for entrepreneurs to access resources and bring ideas to the marketplace.

The Innovation System was born from an i6 Challenge grant for $500,000 awarded in February 2016 to the Delta Center for Economic Development (DCED) from the Economic Development Administration (EDA). A-State utilized the i6 funds to leverage local, state and federal partnerships for the creation of the A-State Innovation System. Combined with $886,967 in in-kind matching, A-State's i6 project had $1.39 million in total support.

ANNUAL PACK PRIDE DAY CELEBRATION

During Pack Pride Day January 23, student leaders recognized individuals and groups who have added to the rich pride and traditions at Arkansas State University.

Alpha Gamma Delta was named as the first recipient of the Bodolf Award. New this year, the Bodolf Award was awarded to the most spirited student organization. Melissa Wilkinson, associate professor of art, received the Scarlet Bella Award. Interim Chancellor Dr. Doug Whitlock received the Howler Award, and this year's winner of the Alpha Wolf Award was the Office of Digital Creative Media.

HOWL ON WHEELS NOW SERVING

A-State Dining Services introduced a new way to find food on campus, Howl on Wheels. The new food truck was introduced at the conclusion of the Fall 2016 semester and served at various locations and special events during Spring 2017.

Howl on Wheels offers new and exciting menu items including chicken & waffles, the Howlie burger and sweet wolves BBQ. You can find the food truck's hours of operation and always-changing location by following @HowlonWheels on Twitter.

QUINN CROWNED MISS A-STATE

Destiny Quinn of Jonesboro was crowned Miss Arkansas State University 2017 at the 43rd annual pageant presented by the Delta Theta chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity. Quinn is a senior at A-State, majoring in multimedia journalism.

With a stated service platform of "Vote! It's Not Just Your Right. It's Your Duty," she presented a tap dance to "Work" during the talent segment of the competition. She was sponsored by the men of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. Her parents are Wade Quinn III and Diana Davis.

STOTTS-HORTON WIN SGA ELECTION

After an intense three-way election and run-off vote, Haley Stotts and Jon Mark Horton earned the honor to serve as A-State's 2017-2018 Student Government Association president and vice president.

The Stotts-Horton ticket focused on bringing smoothie bars to campus, extending hours at the Red WOLF Center, creation of Kays Koffee Shop, adding to the variety of food options at the Howl on Wheels food truck and development of a library study room app.

SPRINGFEST

Along with a glimpse of warmer Spring weather, Springfest brought new and exciting things to campus for students to enjoy before preparing for the stress of finals. The A-State Student Activities Board did not disappoint with the 2017 celebration, hosting carnival rides, the always-popular sno cones and more than 20 different species of animals in the Happy Tails Petting Zoo. Llamas, goats and rabbits were among the favorites.

SPOKEN WORD ARTIST VISITS CAMPUS

The A-State Student Activities Board welcomed poet and spoken word artist Ashlee Haze to campus in April for a coffeehouse-style performance in the Sun Belt Lounge of the Reng Student Union. Haze has been featured in Nylon, The New Yorker and Lane Bryant's #ThisBody campaign.

Accompanying Haze's performance was a contemporary dance routine by A-State student Mikka Simone. Pictured are Haze, Simone, SAB's 2016-17 Special Events Director Christian Canizales and SAB's 2017-18 Cultural Enrichment Director Marlana Robinson.

The Circle, a new residential facility designed primarily for graduate students and medical students, was officially opened with a ribbon-cutting and dedication ceremony August 7.

The individual buildings in the 196-bed complex are named for the first four African American faculty members at A-State in recognition of their historic roles in campus desegregation.

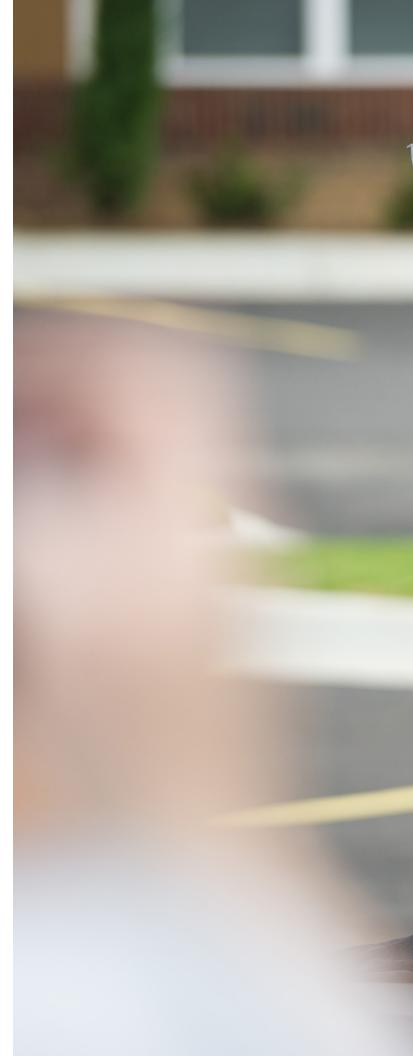

Dr. Calvin Smith, the first African American faculty member at Arkansas State, as well as Dr. Wilbert Gaines, Dr. Mossie Richmond and Dr. Herman Strickland formed a mutual support group they called "The Circle" as they and their families made Jonesboro their home in the 1970s.

Gaines and Strickland, as well as Mrs. Richmond and Mrs. Smith, briefly addressed the large crowd that had gathered for the historic occasion, expressing their joy and excitement to see The Circle come to fruition. Other speakers included Dr. Kelly Damphousse, chancellor; Dr. Rick Stripling, vice chancellor for student affairs; Haley Stotts, president of the Student Government Association; Dr. Lonnie Williams, associate vice chancellor for student affairs; and Garrison Rice, second-year medical student at the New York Institute of Technology College of Osteopathic Medicine at A-State.

The location of The Circle along Aggie Road, just west of the Military Science Building, is where the four families lived in faculty housing along what was then called East College Circle and West College Circle. Because the proximity of their residences helped the families provide mutual support, the site is considered significant in A-State's history.

The university Board of Trustees last year approved naming the complex as The Circle, and the buildings are Gaines Hall, Richmond Hall, Smith Hall and Strickland Hall.

The project is part of the university's first public-private partnership to construct campus housing.

"May The Circle Be Unbroken"

The first African American faculty and administrators of Arkansas State University and their families lived in this area of campus during the early 1970s. The community they forged fostered the growth of acceptance and diversity among all the students, faculty and staff. These buildings are dedicated to these four families so that we may continue their legacy.

GLOBAL STUDENT LEADERS VISIT EUROPE

The Global Student Leader (GSL) program began at A-State with the mission of preparing students in challenging and diverse ways to become more productive global citizens.

In May, advisers Alexis Hurdle and Booker Mays traveled with 20 student leaders to experience the culture of Scotland and England. The group made stops in Edinburgh, Yorkshire, Oxford and London, visiting various historical sites and learning about each destination's distinct character.

ON THE ROAD WITH A-STATE BASEBALL

Diamond Dolls from Arkansas State hit the road during spring break to cheer on their favorite Red Wolves team. The ladies traveled to Conway, South Carolina to watch A-State battle with defending national champion Coastal Carolina University in a three-game series.

HONORS GETS 'A TASTE OF ITALY'

As part of the Honors Study Abroad program, more than 40 students, faculty and staff traveled to Italy in May to study the slowfood movement as part of their coursework.

The two-week excursion made stops in Cuneo, Florence, Bologna, and Rome. This culinary adventure included various tastings, a cheese making demonstration, participation in a cooking class and visits to prominent local historical sites like the Leaning Tower of Pisa and the Sistine Chapel.

A-STATE CHOIR PERFORMS IN IRELAND

The Arkansas State University Community Choir traveled to Ireland to spend its Spring Break meeting new musical friends and sharing music with them.

The 74 faculty, students, family members and community choir members from A-State, Little Rock, Pocahontas and points in-between made three formal concert performances and a few impromptu appearances in Dublin, Killarney, Kilkenny and Waterford.

RED WOLVES VIE FOR MISS AR TITLE

Arkansas State was proud to have six students represent the university at the 2017 Miss Arkansas pageant in June. Pictured left to right are Ashley Ehrhart, Miss Arkansas Delta; Bailey Moses, Miss Northeast Arkansas; Kenzie Williams, Miss Metro; and Jade Collins, Miss Diamond Lakes. Not pictured are Claudia Raffo, Miss White River and Destiny Quinn, Miss Arkansas State University.

Ehrhart was named 2nd runner-up, earning a $9,000 scholarship. Moses earned the 3rd runner-up spot with a $7,500 scholarship, and Raffo earned a $5,000 scholarship at 4th runner-up.

STUDENT-ATHLETES VISIT LONDON

Fifteen student-athletes from A-State studied abroad in London, England during May 2017. These students and faculty advisers learned about British sports and culture by visiting various athletic facilities including the 2012 Olympic Stadium, Wimbledon, NFL UK, Arsenal Soccer Club and more. The group also ventured to the British Museum, National Gallery, and on a bike tour of the city, all while earning course credit.

A new landmark was introduced to the Arkansas State University campus August 15 when a 350-pound, bronze red wolf statue was presented to the university by the Student Government Association.

The statue was unveiled by Haley Stotts, president of the A-State Student Government Association, and Logan Mustain, SGA president when the idea for the statue originated during the 2015-16 academic year.

"If you've been on campus this summer, you've probably seen a lot of construction that has happened," said Stotts at a reception prior to the unveiling. "This wolf is just adding to our campus beautification process so that future students can enjoy this campus just as much as we have today. I am excited to see how the campus is growing and I can't wait to see all that we accomplish this year."

Quoting Rudyard Kipling, A-State chancellor Dr. Kelly Damphousse said, "The strength of the pack is the wolf, and the strength of the wolf is the pack,' and I hope that every time the students walk by the statue of this red wolf, they are reminded that they are part of a pack. The pack is always there for the students, and each of them is responsible to the pack as well."

The statue, depicting a howling red wolf, is located on Aggie Circle, just east of the Carl R. Reng Student Union.

"The location of the statue is very important because it is near where students will exit the new welcome center that is being built," said Dr. Rick Stripling, vice chancellor for student affairs. "As they come by they can take pictures and be a part of the A-State family on the front end."

"This is just a recognition of how great things are going for Arkansas State University right now," said Mustain. "These are truly great times for Arkansas State."

The statue was sculpted in Querétaro, Mexico and an identical statue will be in place at A-State Campus Querétaro when the site opens September 2017.

LETTER FROM YOUR Sga president

To some, welcome back. To others, welcome home. To all, welcome.

This is our first edition of WolfTracks in its newly-designed format, and in it you will find many colorful memories from the Spring and Summer. Over the course of the 2016-2017 school year, we saw great healing and exciting change. Dr. Doug Whitlock stepped in as interim chancellor toward the beginning of the year and carried out the role with such grace and direction throughout his entire term.

At the end of the 2017 Spring semester, our Red Wolf pack grew by two as we welcomed our new chancellor and his beautiful wife, Dr. Kelly and Beth Damphousse. If you haven't met this dynamic duo yet, I'm sure you will. They have been SO active on our campus and in our community ever since they set foot in Jonesboro, and their kind, genuine, others-focused hearts are unparalleled.

On top of landing what I perceive to be the best chancellor, first lady, and even first dog, we've also seen lots of great improvements in campus beautification (i.e. the new red wolf statue), campus climate (i.e. Red Wolf Talks), and campus life in general. AND WE'RE NOT STOPPING NOW!

I look forward to this year ahead with you all. If there's anything I can ever do for you, don't hesitate to stop by the Student Government Association office (Reng Student Union, Room 2001) and we'll chat. #WolvesUp for the Fall 2017 semester; it's going to be a great one!
